IMPROVEMENTS IN SAWING-MACHINES.—There is now on view at Messrs. Long and Co.'s, Wigmore-street, a new sawing-machine, by Wheeler and Watson, which embodies several new mechanical features, and which is an improvement on other machines by the same well-known makers. It is adapted for either slow or heavy work, so that a person requiring to do leather work after fine has only to remove the hand off one wheel on to another. This can be effected in a few seconds. The curvature noticeably the needs of the family machine is done away with in the new design. The new machines are presented by "A" take up spring, which gathers and loose the new is also fitted with a hobbin gear and loose for the new and loose.

MURDER BY AN ABORIGINAL.—Early this month (says the Durham Dispatch), a blackfellow named Jackey Blayen murdered his gin, by stabbing her with a spear. Several blackfellow witnesses were present when the deed was committed, but the matter was not reported to the police till a few days ago. The Mundauma police are now in pursuit of Jackey.

21 CHILD EATEN BY A DOG.—On Thursday afternoon (the Breadwinners Dispatch reports), Charles Quosh, a little boy of about three years of age, son of Mr. W. R. Quosh, of Kyrie-street, in this town, received a rather severe injury from a dog which was tied up in a kennel. The dog, which was a large one, good-tempered, and knew the child well; but the little fellow had got a stick, and was tapping the animal on the leg to make it go into the kennel, when it lifted up his foot, as if to shake hands, when its paw caught the child's eye, and tore the flesh down to the cheek-bone.

DEATH FROM STARVATION IN THE BUSH.—The Etheridge correspondent of the Townsville paper tells a touching story of the death in the bush of a little boy between 5 and 6 years of age, named Henry Bernacker, who strayed away on Saturday, the 2nd of August, and was not discovered until the following Thursday morning, when he was found by Mr. Huddy, a saddler, about 4 or 5 miles from the township, in a dying condition. It appears the poor little fellow had been walking in a circle the whole day and night.

COLONEL STEINBECKER—This gentleman, says the Hawaiian Gazette, of July 16, whose intended visit to this and other groups in this ocean was announced in our issue of May 28, arrived in the yacht Fanny, on Sunday last. The statement given in the Gazette of the above date was substantially correct, although officially denied by our contemporary, who appears to have known nothing of the facts of the case. Colonel S. is commissioned for a special service: just what, probably, no one knows but himself. He leaves on Thursday, via Hilo, for the Navarin Islands and Pijia, thence perhaps to Tahiti, and back to the port. He is detailed on a tour of observation, to gather such information as is sought by the American Government on such points as it has commissioned him to investigate. It is reasonable to presume that, if President Grant is asked to select a site for a naval station here or elsewhere, he wishes to be posted as to the relative value of any harbour offered. At all events, this is the only way in which he can be so posted.

NEW ORGANS IN BRISBANE.—A brief description of a new organ, recently

Brisbane, may interest our musical readers. The Brisbane Courier says that this important instrument was built by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and Co., of London, according to a specification by the late organist (Mr. Vignen). It was, however, been the subject of a special fund of one year's subscription, and the occasion of its arrival in the colony was celebrated by Mr. R. T. Jofferies' present choir-master and organist co-operate with the Church of England ministers in Brisbane in an inaugural service upon a scale of completeness never approached before in Queensland. The organ

DIPHTEHRIN.—Mr. Robert Greathouse (observes the Argus) has discovered a mode of treatment for diphtheria which he believes to be an absolute remedy for that difficult disease, and he is willing to make public his secret in consideration of a reward of £5000. He submitted a proposal to the Chief Secretary that he, if a guarantee for the above reward were given him, would take three of the worst cases of diphtheria that could be found, and would cure each patient in a few minutes, and each patient should satisfy the Chief Secretary or any person he might appoint that he or she was perfectly cured. The Chief Secretary referred the matter to Dr. McCrea, the chief medical officer, who addressed a letter to Mr. Greenblatt requesting information as to the particulars of the cases in which his mode of treatment had been applied. He also suggested that Mr. Greenblatt should be given some other case and let him see them before the treatment was applied. Mr. Greenblatt pointed out that it was very difficult for him to get cases, and asked whether Dr. McCrea would allow him to use his name in investigating his patients. This request Dr. McCrea was very much inclined to comply with, but he let Mr. Greenblatt clearly understand that his duty simply consisted in thoroughly leading the van of the alleged remedy, and in investigating the process adopted in the cases which Mr. Grant had promised to provide. Mr. Granthead considered this answer unsatisfactory, and through Mr. Grant brought the subject under the notice of Parliament. Mr. Granthead communicated the precious secret to Mr. Grant, who, on his experience as a physician, was able to arrive at a belief that all that Mr. Granthead promised he would be able to perform. The one thing necessary to secure the reward was, that persons suffering from the disease should present themselves at the dispensary.

Broathood. Mr. Francis replied that the Government would not accept the terms of the proposal, but the chief medical officer would be prepared to inspect any cases where this mode of treatment was applied. He suggested that if the remedy were really as valuable as described, publicity was the only thing required to enable the discoverer to realise a large fortune. Mr. Broathood, it appears, is not a medical practitioner, so that he may have a natural dread of entering into a competition where ill success might be dangerous.

A SAVAGE ASSAULT BY SEAMEN.—The following case is reported in the British Courier:—Two seamen, named Peter Moody and Francis Allen, belonging to the Martletown, were on Thursday charged with assaulting William Muir, the second mate. The affair took place on the previous night, about 11 o'clock, as the vessel was being towed up the river. The prisoners, with others of the crew, were leaving the windlass, and having got the anchor close under the bows, they called to the second mate to haul in the slack chain, which was running out. As altercation followed, in the course of which the officer in question was informed from the "fo'castle" that he had "a great deal too much cheek," and that he "wanted some of it taken out of him." The second mate, who is quite a young fellow, replied that neither the speaker nor any of the crew could do it, whereupon Allen, who had taken a prominent part in the conversation, came down the "fo'castle" ladder, and proceeded along the main deck to where his superior was hauling; but the chief officer sent him back to his duties. Unluckily, another opportunity presented itself, and Moody, jumping on to the main deck, went up to the second mate, who, in his evidence, deposed: He struck me with his fist, and I struck back; we closed, and he scratched my face with his nails (the face itself testifying to the fact that it had been scratched); we fell, and then I saw Allen, who struck me about the head: both the prisoners struck me at the same time: when down Allen kicked me, and Moody, taking hold of a rail, jumped on me: the mate, the carpenter, and a second-class passenger, separated them, and they went back to their work. Corroborative evidence was given. His Worship, after commenting on the brutality of the assault, sentenced the culprits to twelve weeks' hard labour in Brisbane gaol.

SCENE AT STANTHORPE.—The drawing for the two areas of ground thrown open under the mining license system at Lode Creek took place on Monday last, and the interest displayed in so small an area of land (obviously harder lost) shows plainly the great advantages which would inevitably accrue to the inhabitants of this district.

were this system of taking up ground made applicable to all selections that may henceforth become forfeited or otherwise thrown open for selection. The time for depositing applications at the Land Office was between the hours of 9 and 10 a.m., and so great was the rush made by the intending applicants that it was only when a body of armed police came upon the verandah of the Land Office, and forced the crowd back, that it was possible to give in the applications, and even then the police had to receive them from the hands of the crowd and pass thru into the office. After some time, however, the numerous applications were given in, and the office was cleared until 3 o'clock, at which time the drawing commenced, but great was the rush on the first occasion, it was nothing in comparison to the second. Shouting, yelling, and crushing were carried on to such an extent, that it was utterly impossible to hear the names that were called out; whereupon the Commissioners left the office and proceeded to the barracks, returning in a few minutes with the police, armed as before, but this had little or no effect, as the rioters were determined to carry out several of the

Mr. Commissioner Humm, then ascended the roof of the verandah, and exhorted the crowd to be patient and to bear their names when called upon to draw. This, for a few minutes, lulled the uproar, and caused a number of the "quiet ones" to draw back some distance, but no sooner had he descended from his elevated position, and resumed his place in the office, than all hands drew up to the verandah again, and the hooting, crushing, &c., were resumed with increased violence. It being found useless to continue, as no one in the crowd, even if they chanced to hear their names called, could by any means reach the window in time, it was closed; and the sergeant of police drew for the remainder of the applicants, merely calling out the names of those for whom he had drawn the lucky numbers; and thus the affair was soon concluded, there being in all only eight claims to draw for. There were six hundred and fifty applications for the eight lots.

GOLDBURN,
 WEDNESDAY, September 17.
MAGNIFICENT FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as RYHANNA
 Twelve miles from the CITY OF GOLDBURN, containing 3320 ACRES Splendid Grazing and Agricultural Land, with Extensive and Substantial Improvements.
 F. S. COHEN and CO. have received instructions from the Trustees in the estate of the late W. SIMMONS, Esq., to sell

Rooms, Auburn-street, on WEDNESDAY, September 17, at 11 o'clock.

That magnificent HYALINE estate, containing 2680 acres, PURCHASED LAND, and 640 acres PRE-EMPTIVE LEASE. The improvements are of the most substantial description, consisting of a faithfully-built BRICK HOUSE with shingle roof, containing twelve rooms, stable, wash-house, kitchen, out-houses, stock-yards, &c. 600 acres are enclosed with a good fence, and subdivided into paddocks, 200 acres of which have been cleared and under cultivation. The whole estate is well and permanently watered, having over a MILE FRONTAGE TO THE TARLO RIVER.

F. S. C. and Co. invite the attention of prospective

THIS VALUABLE ESTATE.
The advantages of possessing a freehold of this extent, so favourably situated, must be patent to every one. The stock-raises of the property have been over-estimated, owing to the acre of land being of the most extensive description, whilst its proximity to the Sydney and Goulburn markets will enable the fortunate purchaser to take advantage of every advance in the markets in a few hours, as stock can be landed at the

HOMEBUSH GALE YARDS
within twelve hours after leaving RYEHANA.

As an extensive agricultural farm it cannot be surpassed by any property in the Southern districts, and when cultivated yields the most and the best and heaviest crops ever garnered in Anyrie.

Throughout Argyle the unsurpassed qualities of this valuable estate are so well known that further comment is unnecessary; but to intending purchasers unacquainted with the property, the auctioneers strongly advise an inspection at an early date as an opportunity of securing an estate with such numerous advantages rarely occurs in this district.

Title perfect.

Terms (liberal) at sale.

Particulars of this sale can be obtained from J. T. GAMMON, Esq., Solicitor, Belmont Chambers.
